Dr. Danielle Mincey White, Managing Director, Athletic Mindset Consulting

Danielle Mincey White has an extensive background in the sport industry as a former athlete, coach, entrepreneur, administrator and professor. She has worked with athletes at all levels, including Xavier University (Ohio); Florida State University; and George Mason University. Danielle developed the first Learning Specialist position at George Mason University. At George Mason University, Danielle served on the university-wide Disability Resource Committee; where she authored the university policy on granting students full-time status with less than full-time credit hours based on documented learning disabilities.

During her tenure at George Mason University; Danielle developed the curriculum for the undergraduate Sport Management program (2000) where she served as the Program Coordinator from 2000-2005. Concurrently, Danielle developed the concept, Sport Management Professional Preparation Institute (SMPPPI) as a method of teaching undergraduate and graduate students the business of sport. SMPPPI has been utilized at five (5) different institutions and is now a division of Athletic Mindset Consulting.

Danielle Mincey White began her academic career at The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio. Danielle earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Marketing. She earned advanced degrees from Xavier University (Ohio – M.Ed., Sport Administration) and; the Florida State University (Ph.D., Sport Administration). While working at the Procter & Gamble Company in her hometown, Cincinnati, Ohio; she volunteered at various high schools working with students labeled "at-risk". During this time, Danielle interest in the transitions of athletes after ending their athletic careers led to her forming a consultancy, Development After Sports, LLC.

Development After Sports became Athletic Mindset Consulting, July 2016; in Dubai, UAE.

Athletic Mindset Consulting, DWC-LLC has three (3) divisions:

Athletic Mindset Consulting, DWC-LLC curriculum and instructional design – specializing in Human Capital and program development; serving the needs of organizations with emphasis on health; wellness and sport.
